"A Clip from Bill in New Delhi"

My second image is a badly dented car with dents on every panel, even dents on dents, its front with no grill looking like old Steptoe when he took his teeth out, the bonnet tied down with rope. This car was stationary, facing oncoming traffic in the wrong lane, The driver a young man covering his face with his hands and his passenger with an amazed look on his face. Nothing unusual really knowing how people drive here other than the sign on the roof of the car - Singh's Motor Driver Training School!

Any volunteers for New Dehli ??

"Now an excerpt from Linley's India"

I watched the rain from the prayer hall window. With the rain came cooler temperatures and the humidity. I am now going through 2 or 3 changes of clothes a day, the washing won't dry unless I put it the bedroom with the door closed and the fan going and I have to open the window in the prayer hall and the door to the courtyard, turn off the air con and let the air circulate through as well as getting the added noise and exhaust fumes from the traffic. I read in the newspaper to watch for termites in inside wooden doors during the monsoon season ! Did I hear anybody complaining about the cold ?

"Umpires "
